INTRODUCTION

This curious index for Worcester County, Maryland surveys and resurveys was discovered in the Nabb Center archives. Written at the top of the first page in handwriting different from the hand of the individual who created the index are the “WR 17 or WR 47 Index”. Due to a smudge on the document it is difficult to tell whether the numbers are 17 or 47. In examining the land records of Worcester County and checking for the surveyors of Worcester County whose names appear again and again in the recorded land records, it appears to us that this index belonged to a surveyor’s book which was used in Worcester County between 1792 and 1814. The surveyors whose names appear most frequently are Littleton Robins Purnell and Johnson Gray, with one survey for each James Rounds (1765) and David Hopkins (1824), who were also surveyors.

This index may have belonged to the personal surveyor’s logbook of Littleton Robins Purnell [but at this time the authorship is uncertain.] However, in examining the Worcester land records for the period noted above and comparing the lists of tract owners with the list of tract names found in this index, it appears that this “mysterious” record book is worthy of being transcribed so that researchers may have easier access to finding land records of Worcester County in the late eighteenth and early nineteenth centuries. Since many of the land record books of Worcester County for this period have no indices, this work will hopefully be useful to the researcher.
